

TO-MORROW,

Sunday, October 30.

We announce proudly and truthfully that The Sunday World for to-morrow will be better than any number of that newspaper issued in many weeks. When you go to the printer's shop, you will find the Sunday World a paper of great value and worth. It will be a paper that will be read by the people of the city and the country. It will be a paper that will be read by the people of the city and the country. It will be a paper that will be read by the people of the city and the country.

A GREAT THEATRICAL PAGE.

We do not propose to describe in detail the features which will make the dramatic department of to-morrow's Sunday World more entertaining and instructive than that department has ever been. Its management has invariably been entrusted to the most capable men in that line of work. We think, however, that the readers of The World will find it more elevating to-morrow than ever before. We ask them to read it with care and to write us promptly if it does not exceed their highest hopes. We believe that the picture presented of Mr. Augustin Daily studying a lady on a trapeze will not fail to delight and instruct.

MR. DIXON—ROBIN KILLER.

The Rev. Mr. Dixon, fond of attacking those who enforce the laws in this city, has amused himself by breaking the laws over in the little kingdom of St. John. Mr. Dixon is a man of spirit and is thought of in the highest terms. Mr. Dixon is a man of spirit and is thought of in the highest terms. Mr. Dixon is a man of spirit and is thought of in the highest terms. Mr. Dixon is a man of spirit and is thought of in the highest terms.

THREE KINDS OF MUSIC.

The Sunday World does all things thoroughly. Sometimes we have to say a great deal about music. Sometimes we have to say a great deal about music. Sometimes we have to say a great deal about music. Sometimes we have to say a great deal about music. Sometimes we have to say a great deal about music.

The Sunday World is literally true. The Sunday World will treat of football, bicycling, boxing and the coming horse show, as well as all other sports in sports complete fashion. When you have read the page yourself send it to your son, brother, nephew, cousin, or best young man at college. It will place him head and shoulders above his fellows as an authority on sports, and he will be deeply grateful. The Sunday World's sporting page will cheer the coming horse show, and will give pictures that will prove to be of great value for every horseman. Mr. John Jacob Astor is now a director and sub-editor of a horse paper, The Rider and Driver. Let him spare five cents to get a Sunday World and he will run no risk of being discharged for incompetency.

"PERILS OF CERTAIN TRAVELLERS."

Possibly you think you have read or looked at everything that Dickens ever wrote. But have you ever read the story whose title is written above? Probably not. It is a story of adventure, of fight and murder. It ends very happily with the death of the villain. It is not necessary to explain the publication or republication of anything that Dickens ever wrote. Here is a statement concerning Dickens written by the English novelist, James Parn, about three weeks ago:

"Since Dickens's copyrights have expired, I have seen more editions of his books than I have ever seen of any other author's. His original publisher, since his decease, has sold more than half a million copies. To those who know how the cold hand of death arrests the circulation of the most popular writer, these facts seem, indeed, amazing."

We agree with Mr. Parn. There are characters in this almost unknown story, which suggest that the soul of Robert L. Stevenson must have lived for a short time in Dickens's body. It is a great favor to the public to give them this interesting work of one of the world's great men.

THE FUNNIEST FUNNY ARTISTS.

Every man in this country, unless his eyes are absolutely gone, looks upon our comic and pantomime young artists as the funniest of the fun. The Sunday World has selected as its samples of the very funny class Mr. Oppel, whose pictures are responsible for Puck's cartoons; Mr. Zimmerman, whose studies of race characteristics are worth tens of thousands each year; to Mr. Atwell and Judge Mr. Chip, who has done the Garden of Eden; to Mr. Atwell and Judge Mr. Chip, who has done the Garden of Eden; to Mr. Atwell and Judge Mr. Chip, who has done the Garden of Eden.

LONG-LEGGED BIRDS.

Mr. Horace Green, who possesses the rare faculty of reading the thoughts and explaining the motives of animals, considers this week the peculiarities of the ostrich, the emu and other interesting birds. It appears that the ostrich, although a tropical bird, preserves his health in this climate by long walks and cold baths. The ostrich, always a silly animal, is given to walking when the sun comes up, and thereby ruins his feathers for commercial purposes.

NOT CONSIDERATE—NOT PROGRESSIVE.

Loisely woman continues to worry about Mr. William S. Wain's allegation that woman is not considerate. On Sunday the World published a long article on this subject. The World on the subject will be published by Mr. Wain's comments on the same. Mr. Wain, far from being intimidated by the attacks upon him, takes the offensive this week and declares that besides being inconsiderate, woman is not progressive. He presents arguments in support of this statement, which will doubtless be replied to most vigorously. Mr. Wain's brilliant articles in the leading magazines have not always presented woman in angelic colors, appears to have experienced a change of heart. He has written an article for Woman's magazine in which he takes woman's side completely. He considers her absolutely considerate and advises everybody to give her her seat in the elevated railroad car.

ED. MOTT'S "ZEBEDEE JOHNSON."

Mr. Ed. Mott is one of the wisest writers in this country. In writing certain dialect there is absolutely nobody who compares with him. When he describes the feelings and the conversation of a gentleman who has taken more to drink than is good for him he stands alone, like Napoleon on the top of his monument in the Place Vendôme. Mr. Mott has in his collection of stories a character named Zebede Johnson. This is the gentleman most famous by the fact that his house was in the streets of New York. Mr. Johnson has been to Chicago this week trying to discover the dedication of the Columbus Fair. His adventures, as Mr. Mott describes them, will be found at least as interesting as anything published to-morrow.

Get the story World. Start out for it early, for you will find it a scarce article. Its circulation is only about twice as big as the combined circulation of two other newspapers printed in this town, while it is ten times as interesting as any three. That fact makes it a hard paper to get.

COLUMBUS'S FIRST LETTER.

The original first edition of the first letter written by Columbus from America to the king of Castile, the escribano de Reclon, is now in the Custom-House, waiting to be claimed by the Lenox Library, which is said to have paid $1,000 for it, of London, £1,500 (£7,500) for it.

It is Spanish and covers four pages, and was printed at Barcelona in April, 1493. No duty will be collected.

POINTERS IN THE RACES.

An Unusually Excellent Programme at Guttenburg To-Day.

Six Good Races for Getaway Day at Bunnings.

The race-gear who complains of lack of variety in the card at Guttenburg to-day must indeed be hard to please. The programme is one of unusual excellence, and the racing should be high class and interesting. The best race of the day will probably be the fifth event, at a mile, in which King Crab, Blade, Balance, Foxford, Lord Harry and Jack Rose are among those named to go. The rights should be hot from the start, and the horse that wins the purse will have been racing. One, Freeman, Mervay, False Ahrens, Postmaster and Trump ought to furnish an excellent contest in the third race, and the hurdle race, although only four entered, promises to turn out very well. The other events are attractive, and ought to make good betting. The track will be dry and fast. The entries and selections are as follows:

First Race—Purse $400; selling allowance, five horses.

"UNCLE TOM" IN LONDON.

To Open Elaborately a New Season at the Princess.

Alexander Mackenzie's Delight Over His Coming to America.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The theatrical season, which opened so well that managers were highly elated at the prospects of making up the losses they incurred last season, is scarcely fulfilling the promises of its earlier days. Yet it is proving fairly satisfactory, and the best evidence of prosperity has been the gradual reopening of all the theatres.

The St. James's Theatre will reopen on Monday, when Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan" will again be put on. The rehearsals of Mr. Carter's "Liberty Hall" are in progress, though the success of its production depends upon the success attending the reproduction of "Lady Windermere's Fan." Alisa Craig, Miss Ellen Terry's daughter, who is well known in amateur circles, will make her debut as a professional in a small part in "Liberty Hall."

Sydney Alport, manager of Terry's Theatre, has purchased the Pomeranian prize dog Queen, which was exhibited at the Crystal Palace. The dog will appear in Sapper's farcical comedy, "A Lucky Dog," which has met with much success at Terry's.

Messrs. Sims and Raleigh, the well-known dramatic authors, have agreed to collaborate in the production of a new series of farcical comedies similar to "The Grey Mare" and "The Guardsman," both of which were written by them.

Mr. Edouard thinks of producing the English version of "Les Deux Jours de Cigarette" in the provinces in the first place, and afterwards of submitting it to London audiences at the Opera Comique.

Mr. Clement Scott is said to have delayed his departure from London for his tour around the world till Nov. 11.

Rollie Baiman, lessee of the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, and proprietor of various theatrical provincial dramatic and operatic companies, has taken a lease of the Princess Theatre, London, from Oct. 20. He will open his season with a powerful and elaborate production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," under the direction of Charles Harnley.

Mr. Ivan Caryll will be the musical conductor at the Globe and Mrs. Ivan Caryll will be the soprano. The opera, "The Barber of Seville," with Mme. Nevada as Rosina and Padilla as Figaro, Mme. Nevada met with a splendid reception. Her voice was as fresh and as charming as ever, but the aspect of the house showed that even first-class exponents fail to excite interest in Rossini's melodrama.

In an interview with the representative of the Associated Press, Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, Principal of the Royal Academy of Music, expressed himself as very much pleased at the prospect of going to the United States. He said he had not decided what work he would produce at the World's Fair at Chicago, but that they would probably be "The House of Shalott" and "Bethlehem" and another work.

He added that he hoped to gain some useful experience in America that would prove of benefit to his pupils.

George E. Vall, an American resident of Paris, has just had a one-act play accepted by one of the Boulevard theatres. This is believed to be the first time that an American has had such a success here.

Princeton and Wesleyans Here and Crescents at Orange.

The Rugby ball will be set a-rolling, or rather a-kicking, in the intercollegiate football championship this afternoon, and from this on it will be nip and tuck, kick and slug until the coveted trophy has been finally won.

The opening game will be played by Princeton and Wesleyan at Manhattan Field and will be called at 3 P. M.

A match not less interesting in the details of the game, will be that between the Orange and Crescent Elevens at East Orange Oval this afternoon. So determined are the Orange lads to whip off the victory that they have been practicing for weeks by electric light.

The make-up of the different teams is appended:

Princeton—Wesleyan Game.

LITTLE FREDDY'S TIN TRUMPET.

(From the Pile of Blotter.)

The Citizen Not on the List To-Night Loses His Vote.

Totals of the Three Days' Registration Increased Over 1888.

The man whose name is not on the registration list when the inspectors of election close their books to-night cannot vote at the election one week from next Tuesday. To-day is the last day for the registration of voters in this city and Brooklyn, as well as all other cities and towns in the State.

The inspectors of election are in session at every polling place in this city and Brooklyn to-day. In New York the books will remain open until 9 o'clock this evening and in Brooklyn until 10 o'clock.

To be entitled to register, the applicant must be twenty-one years of age, a citizen of the United States by birth or naturalization, a resident of the State at least one year, or of the county at least four months and of the election district at least thirty days. He must apply in person and answer the interrogatories of the inspectors under oath.

Party managers realize the importance of every vote, and are endeavoring to get every man registered who has the right to vote. A duty is urged upon every citizen to register at the earliest possible moment, on penalty of disfranchisement for the election.

Predictions that yesterday's registration would approximate a total of 70,000 names were realized, the announced figure being 69,779, or 3,070 more than in the third day of registration for the last Presidential election in 1888. The total registration for the three days this year is 272,103, the corresponding day in the last Presidential election of 253,591, or a gain this year of 18,512. This leaves a margin of only 14,407 names to be registered to-day—the third day of registration.

The gains yesterday were in the strong Democratic districts. In the Second Assembly District the increase, as compared with 1888, was 1,402. In the Eleventh, a Republican district, the gain was 223, and in the Twenty-first, a Republican stronghold, the registration actually fell off 544 from the figures of the third day in 1888.

The following table shows the registration on the three days of 1888, 1890, 1891, 1892, and 1893, with totals for the three days of each year:

Assembly District, 3d day, 3d day, 3d day, 3d day, 3d day.

Totals, 1888, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1893.

Brooklyn there were registered yesterday 34,376 voters, a decrease from the total of 35,000 registered on the day in 1888. The grand total for the three days, however, is 114,253, or 7,043 more than the total of the first three days in 1888.

These figures show the fact that the interest of voters on the ground that they had registered on the first two days, not waiting until the third.

Here are the complete figures:

Wards, 1892, 1891, 1890, 1889, 1888.

DALTONS WERE MARSHALS.

Their Real Character Was Revealed by Theft of Horses.

Pursued by a Posse They Secured Relays at the Pistol's Point.

"Great fellows they were in their line," said Charles O. Whitte, stenographer in the office of W. C. Cushing, Engineer of Maintenance of Way on the Indianapolis Division of Pennsylvania lines according to the Indianapolis News. He was speaking of the Dalton gang of cut-throats recently wiped out of existence.

"You knew them then?"

"Well, I should say I did. I was doing newspaper work in the West about the time they began their criminal careers. In September, 1890, the Daltons were United States marshals, operating in certain parts of Indian Territory. It was a fact that they could recover more stolen horses than any like number of United States marshals in the Territory, but it was also a fact that they seldom caught the thief they, of course, were the thieves themselves."

"Previous to that time they were considered honest horse dealers and trustworthy officers; but finally they drove a large herd of ponies to Columbus, Cherokee County, Kan., and sold them to W. W. Scott, a stock dealer of Baxter Springs. They seemed rather anxious to get rid of the ponies and sold them for a reasonable sum, their excuse being that the cold weather was rapidly coming on and that they did not care to winter them. They received $400 for them. They then promised to deliver a similar number at Baxter Springs in two weeks."

In the mean time, however, United States marshals appeared in Baxter Springs and made a description of all the ponies sold by the Daltons. The Daltons recovered for the true character of Bob and Emmett Dalton. Scott had been told that he was to watch for them in two weeks and capture the thieves or get a satisfactory explanation of their disappearance. He was, however, becoming fearful of his own safety, brought in the ponies in about a week and corralled them in a corral near the town.

"With a young reporter's zeal I was at this time interviewing the Daltons concerning the ponies. Bob Dalton possessed a handsome face, with a certain degree of coolness and without a peer; but he could not resist the temptation to become restless, and everything seemed to come under his observation. He was tall, over six feet in height and with a perfect physique. There was an air of keenness about him which seemed characteristic. In conversation he would little slant and he was a good talker, as far as that term applies to a gentleman. As a marksman it is said that he was almost without a peer; that he could kill a prairie chicken on the wing with a .30-06 revolver."

"Emmett was rather below the medium height, but square built and wiry as a cat. He was a good talker and a good talker, as far as that term applies to a gentleman. As a marksman it is said that he was almost without a peer; that he could kill a prairie chicken on the wing with a .30-06 revolver."

"During the time of my conversation, Scott passed by and observed that the Daltons were excited. He said that he saw the Daltons in the town in about ten minutes, and whipping up his horses disappeared around the bend in the road. Bob Dalton, however, did not turn to a bystander, asked him who the man was. He was told that it was W. W. Scott, who was going to purchase some stolen horses from the Daltons boys. On hearing of this Bob Dalton's countenance changed, and he and the others—Emmett and the heretofore bigger-saddled brother—looked at each other and then at Scott as possible, leaving everything behind except their guns. They knew that they would be pursued by a large posse, for a horse-thief is never far from a posse of law-abiding citizens. Hanging such a man seems to be a great source of gratification to the law-abiding citizen. They were in court for they are nearly always murderers as well, and their doom is sealed when once they are tried by the United States courts."

"The Daltons dreamed the Winchester rifle. They knew that if they were pursued by any posse it would be a matter of time before they would be able to get far enough ahead of the posse to escape. They knew that they would be pursued by a large posse, for a horse-thief is never far from a posse of law-abiding citizens. Hanging such a man seems to be a great source of gratification to the law-abiding citizen. They were in court for they are nearly always murderers as well, and their
